

Office of the Director of Central Intelligence

22 February 1974

MEMORANDUM FOR : The Director

SUBJECT : FEO Intelligence Support

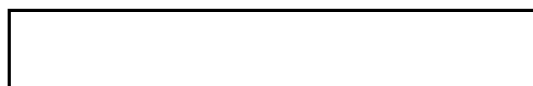

1. FEO is obviously going to play a key role in international energy affairs. FEO is not formally a member of the intelligence community and has not taken steps to establish procedures for the protection of classified intelligence materials.

2. FEO is rapidly establishing an analytical capability within its Office of International Energy Affairs, headed by Stephen A. Wakefield. This office is developing an appetite for basic data, raw intelligence and finished production that will eventually lead to increased information requirements being levied on the Agency and will permit the transfer of Agency and Community material to FEO files.

3. FEO sent a qualified and cleared representative to the initial gathering of the intelligence community to examine the energy KIQs and other common interests. Furthermore, FEO is playing a central role in the Kissinger-Cooper-Donaldson machinery and will obviously require access to intelligence products on a routine basis.

4. It is my impression that FEO is not now prepared to handle classified intelligence material, severely limiting the Agency's support role and FEO's analytical capabilities. I plan to discuss this problem with FEO at an early date and will keep you informed.

cc: George Carver
General Walters

James H. Critchfield
NIO/Energy

25X1

INTERNAL USE ONLY